On the other half of the draw MacDonald still leads but the competition is much keener because Hugh James' rink defeated MacDonald's rink last Saturday night. That leaves MacDonald with one loss and in second place. There are several teams with two losses so everybody is pulling for MacDonald now.

Passengers between Britain and America can now fly the Atlantic at an average speed of 300 miles an hour, but next year even faster aircraft will be put into service. The air passenger of 1967 will have the option of crossing the ocean asleep in a comfortable bed in a luxuriously equipped aircraft at a speed of 310 miles per hour or of having less comfort and on sleeping berth while travelling at 450 miles per hour. It is expected that this speed will later be increased still further.

Coal Strike In British Columbia Has Lasted For 90 Days

NANAIMO, B.C.—Coal strikes can be long affairs. One has been going on here for 93 days and the men are still out.

Henry Castillon, K.C., of Vancouver, told the Nanaimo Pioneers' Society that it.

Indian miners went on strike in 1853, and a native has never worked in the mines here since.

The Indians were hired to dig coal for His Majesty's ship. They received four shillings a day, plus presents for their chiefs, but they soon quit, demanding higher pay. There was no settlement.

Mining methods were crude, the miners being lowered into the shaft in a big tub.

Mr. Castillon described the walk-out as the "longest coal miners' strike in history."

PROTEIN OF WESTERN WHEAT IS WELL MAINTAINED

The average protein content of the 1946 Western wheat crop is 12.8 per cent, according to the latest crop bulletin issued by the Laboratory of the Board of Grain Commissioners. The figure is exactly the same as that for the 1945 crop, and 0.2 per cent higher than the mean for the past 20 years.

Protein values examined by provinin provincial figures between this and Saskatchewan are higher by 0.9 and 0.3 per cent, and for Alberta lower by 0.7 per cent, this year.

As age has passed since I received the official telegram. Though it marked the end of a cycle in my life, that day does not stand out in my mind as a day of horror, for I did not believe the message. You could not be dead, you who were the most vital and vital person I had ever known. Besides, your guy whimsical letters came that week and the next.
Nothing, only silence. The realization must have come gradually, till finally I accepted the belief that you were dead.

With that realization, it suddenly seemed terribly important that I should know you came to death.
When you known to his by the expression? Were you struck by falling debris to suffer before the end, or did I long to see you in a bit of wreckage till nymph fingers relaxed and you sank down and down into the green depths of the sea? Fervently I wrote to names and addresses of survivors pleased from newspaper lists. Sometimes no answer came. Those that did were sympathetic but not helpful.
None could tell me what I seemed I must know.

When all these possibilities were exhausted and I accepted the fact that the knowledge I craved was not to be, the children came and settled on my spirit through long days and longer nights. The horrible thought that soon you would be forgotten in the world of men and women possessed me in waking moments.
Immortality in some distant sphere seemed too good and remote a hope to offer any comfort.

The children could not sympathize.
True, they demanded attention and love, but my mind was too much in torment, but to them you were only a bright and gallant picture on my memory.

Janet was too little to remember you even from your last leave.
I longed passionately for some gift or token to perpetuate your memory, but the children were too young to understand the beauty and value of trials of you, or I could dedicate sonnets or prose tributes to you, or compose a grand musical aria in remembrance. I asked for the ability.

"...round thee with the breeze of song.
To sit a little dead of praise."

But the children, like the children, I was glad beyond words that I had them, glad that we had not let the war hinder plans we had made that summer for marriage in the autumn. After all it would have been foolish to postpone it, for I, even though, knowing you as I did, I was sure you would soon leave me. I would have loved you less if you had hesitated in that.

Your leaves were moments of happiness, exquisite even in memory. Yet, I had memories, so many, so perfect.
Like clouds of a rosy, counted them over, treasuring each one, believing with the last time he wrote Rob brought you home to visit.
That was a magic week. At its close, I was glad to go home. I followed, each with a little shadow on its sweetness, for you carried something of my heart, and I left a little of yours with me.

For I could remember you as last good-bye, the poignantly lovely moment when you tipped my chin with the tip of your whisper.
"I love you—forever!"

I could only whisper in return the pledge
"Forever!"

And when the mist of tears cleared away, you were gone.
Thus, I counted the pearls, always turning back when I came to the cross. I could not kiss the cross.

The memories were sweet, but I knew that I who had loved you so dearly could not always keep you vivid in memory.

If you grew memory with too heavy a hand
You will destroy memory with all its glory

You will be left with only the worn dead story
You told yourself of the dead."

So, the agonizing days of a long winter dragged on and on into spring.
Perhaps it was the spring that a true sense of values came to me.
I cannot claim any vision or revelation or message from you. Perhaps the real idea of your immortality reached me with the spring, for the upsurge of new life all around must surely bring a corresponding upsurge of hope in the heart. I only knew that one day in the garden with Janet and Ronnie heading for the tulips you planted, the thought came to me that these children were your immortality. The idea came quite simply and quietly as if it had been in my subconscious mind a long time and only flowered to light in the spring sunshine, seeing your tulips and your children all in one picture.

The children were you, and you were there, here and alive. Seeing them, people would think of you. Of Ronnie, they would say, "He has the same dark eyes as his father, look like the 'Anasas,' you know." And of Janet, "Looks like her mother, but has the characteristics of her father, look like the 'Anasas,' you know."

You would not be forgotten.
The thought opened up all sorts of delightful possibilities. Suddenly, wanted to sing and dance and be gay as I had not felt for months. A burden was lifted from my heart. Now, counting the pearls of remembrance, I could kiss the cross.

Now it is full summer. I write to you often. Never having had much time together, I like to think you have only gone a little further away from me in a little longer time. I feel closer to you now in my new happiness than I did in my grief, for you were always so happy and gay.

On sunny afternoons I lie out, under your beloved white birch and look into the blue sky overhead. Sometimes great white clouds float about like ships. I imagine you leaning out from a cloudship in the sea of sky, and shouting down, "Hi, Sweet, is everything all right with you?"

And I wave back and answer, "Everything's okay, Ron."

Four Bridge Players Too Starited To Make Bid
LONDON, Ont.—Four perfect bridge hands were dealt in a friendly game here. The "miracle" didn't end there—they were dealt in order of rank from clubs to spades. Ted Gakemura fed himself the clubs.
Other players were Mary Markham, Fred Kagawa and Arthur Nunda.
Everyone was so startled there was no bidding. It was just too much for us," said Miss Markham.

Sidney S. Lenz, in the Encyclopedia of Bridge by Ely Culbertson, dealing with the perfect hand in bridge, has this to say:

"In a pack of 52 cards, there are 53,647,737,648,192,830,237,044, 000 combinations, no two alike. Any thirteen cards should appear once in 650,013,266,600 deals. A player averaging eight rubbers a day with each rubber averaging six deals in 300 working days per year would have dealt 14,000 hands. A specific hand should appear once in 44,068,164 years, or an average of 13 cards to die on the law of averages in short intervals of 11,024,541 years."

The earliest recorded mention of Indian summer is 1794.

the articles they intend to send to

TRAPPERS USE PLANE TO HUNT COYOTES

Ex-United States Army Flyers Use Ski-Equipped Aircraft

GOEMIA, Sask.—Air warfare on coyotes is being waged today in this prairie district 50 miles south of Winnipeg by two commercial hunters equipped with a tiny ski-equipped aircraft and a shotgun.

The men, Irving Larson, 23-year-old ex-United States army flyer and Walter Colby, 38, both of Stanley, N.D., have a license to hunt the animals in Canada.

The plane swoops over the prairie bush-hunt within a 30-mile radius of Goemia searching out the animals and Colby shoots them while Larson maneuvers the plane.

The hunters land the aircraft beside the shot animals and skin them on the spot. They have shot up 11 in one morning and the pelts are worth $12 each.

The air hunters say the coyotes stand up on their hind legs as the aircraft swoops low trying to ward off the attack.

Story About British Sergeant Proves That Self Control Pays

Stressing the moral advantages which the community gains from the fighting services, where discipline teaches men and women to exercise self control, Sir Philip Zoult, Director of Public Relations at the Air Ministry, relates this story from Germany at a recent Chamber of Commerce luncheon in London: A Sergeant, whose duty it was to lead a British convoy, went up to his commanding officer and said: "That is the last time I'll do this, sir." He explained that at a crossroad, where he was stopping traffic to let the convoy pass, an old woman had spat at him.
What did you do? "My commanding officer asked, 'I gave her a bar of chocolate, sir.' "And what did she do?" "She burst into tears."

and is thickened. Cook, stirring occasionaly. Fold in whipped cream.
Makes 2½ cups filling.

How to Whip Light Cream 2 tablespoons cold water 1½ teaspoons granulated gelatin 1 cup light cream

1. Add water gradually to gelatin in small bowl, mixing well. Heat and stir over boiling water until gelatin is completely dissolved. Remove from boiling water, add cream and salt, and mix. Place in bowl of ice and water and whip at top with rotary egg beater 5 to 7 minutes, or until mixture begins to hold shape around edges. Remove from ice water and add stiffly with spoon, or until smooth. Serve or store in refrigera-

Suffering China Calls to Canadian Farmers

WAR has spread wreckage and suffering among the 500,000,000 people of China's Pacific neighbor—China. Blasted from farms and villages, millions of Chinese families are homeless, hungry and in rags, dying daily from starvation and disease. China was first to feel the Pacific onslaught. For eight terrible years—from July, 1937 to August, 1945—China heroically braved the aggressor's border. Two years longer than any of her allies!

Farmers Call to Farmers

To-day, China presents a heart-rending spectacle to Canadians mercifully spared the ravages of enemy guns and bombs. And especially to Canadian farmers!

About 83 per cent. of China's 500,000,000 people are peasant farmers. To the scourge of Japanese planes and artillery have been added, in many districts, food or drought, and shortage of seed grain. Besides the need for food, clothing, medical supplies, hospital equipment, there is urgent need for reconstruction of farms and homes.

Canada's Aid Essential

During the war, Canadians, through The Chinese War Relief Fund, sent to China some $2,654,000 in money and over 1,464,000 pounds of used clothing, valued at some $2,929,000. But the aftermath of war can be more terrible than war itself. The world-wide relief work of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency (UNRRA) ends March 1st in China. The burden will fall on voluntary agencies. So Canadian Aid to China (formerly The Chinese War Relief) is making a national appeal. This is an urgent call to Canadian farmers to support this effort.

How YOU Can Help

To make it more convenient for YOU to participate, all Elevator companies have been authorized to receive donations of part of grain deliveries as Aid to China.

When you deliver grain to your Elevator, simply tell the Elevator Agent how many bushels you wish to donate to Canadian Aid to China. The aim is one per cent. of the storage capacity of each Elevator. Will YOU help to make this possible?

Enlightened Self-Interest

This appeal is to our common humanity as citizens of the One World from which to-day we dare not isolate ourselves. In helping to rehabilitate the Chinese, we are hastening a return to world health and progress.

But we may well remember that China is not only a World Neighbor of Canada, but a good potential customer for our products. In helping her to recover from her war wounds, we are building goodwill and laying the basis of profitable relations in the days to come.

WHAT TO DO

When you deliver grain to your Elevator, simply tell the Elevator Agent how many bushels you wish to donate to CANADIAN AID TO CHINA. Your Agent will make out a ticket in the name of CANADIAN AID TO CHINA for your donation. Official Receipts will be forwarded to you from your Provincial Headquarters for income tax purposes.

No cheque to write, no cash to pay, no mailing to do. It's as simple as that!

CANADIAN FARMERS, BE GENEROUS! CHINA, A GOOD NEIGHBOR, NEEDS YOUR HELP!

This is the only national appeal to be made in Canada during the next twelve months for Chinese relief.

Marking a new era in hotel comfort, ultra-modern "day-night" parlor beds have been introduced at the Royal York, the Canadian Pacific's 1200-room hotel in Toronto. Largest hotel in the British Empire, the Royal York (inset) is the first in Canada to put in the new style equipment. Shown above as a parlor by day and a bedroom by night, the rooms have along one wall a luxurious Chesterfield unit which can be tumbled down into a three-quarter bed. The unit also houses a writing desk, which becomes a dressing table when the top is lifted; storage space for lounge cushions and bedding; a side table and trays.

Of all the defeats that Japan suffered in the World War, none was more complete morally and materially than that she sustained in the Pacific Islands. She ended the war in one of them, Pearl Harbor in the north, and the long arm of her aggression was halted at Guadalcanal in the south. The official story of the Pacific Islands at war is now told in a booklet entitled "Among These Islands" prepared for the United Kingdom Colonial Office. Although the notion that the Solomon Islands could be defended against Japanese attack was regarded as impossible, no suggestion of abandonment was ever raised. Responsible officials stayed and went underground and a game of hide and seek requiring ceaseless vigilance and courage was played until re-occupation was possible. In this plan the natives played their full share displaying a fanatical loyalty to the cause. The enemy invaded their country and they lived in his midst never doubting that the day would come when those of them who survived would be driven out. They did not speak to him unless they had to; they never co-operated in any shape or form that would do harm to Britain's cause. They ran innumerable risks in conveying information to the Allied forces of enemy dispositions without thinking of the risks involved.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM NOTES

It is common knowledge that the greatest part of an iceberg is beneath the surface of the water. In fact authorities agree that close to 90 percent of the ice is under water leaving only 10 percent of ice showing in the plant world frequently 50 percent and often much more of the plant is below ground. For too often we think only of the part we see and not enough of the part that is out of sight.

Western Canadian agriculture is controlled largely by the root habits of crop plants. Usually soil structure and fertility are favorable for growth. Sunlight, oxygen, and carbon dioxide are in abundance while water of course is the limiting factor. Soil moisture can be controlled by irrigation but without irrigation our agriculture is dependent on the root habits of plants.

At one time it was generally believed that roots obtained all of their water and food supplies from the upper six inches of soil. We know now that roots not only penetrate to considerable depths but they also absorb both moisture and nutrients from the full depth of penetration. Alfalfa roots have been traced to six feet. Sweet root crops from 25 to 30 feet.

numerous thread-branches. Fibrous root systems have a tremendous absorbing area. It was found that a single three year old crested wheat grass plant with a depth of penetration of about 9 feet had a total length of roots of 364 miles! With such a tremendous mass of roots this plant is very efficient in absorbing water.

It is small wonder too that crested wheatgrass sod so capably withstands both wind and water erosion.

Plant roots are truly efficient organs. Not only do they absorb moisture and nutrients for the plant under a tremendous range of conditions, they also make a wonderful anchorage system for the soil.

In depth. Most of our native grasses penetrate well into the sub-soil while an individual plant of crested wheat grass has been known to send down roots to a depth of nearly 10 feet.

Some of our crop plants have a taproot, which is a single root with varying degrees of branching. Alfalfa has a tap root. Our grasses (including the cereal crops) have a fibrous root system made up of

Years ago Canada was the last refuge of many wild animals, because of the advance of settlement in this country the habitat, particularly if big game was gradually taken over and the animal life was being inexorably wiped out. A few decades ago none but the adventurous, who was content to spend days and possibly weeks in the attempt, could see such animals as the mountain goat and the big horn sheep in their native surroundings. Today, the visitor to national parks may come across these and many other big game animals without having to go very far afield.
